DOLEBOLION
PONTRHYDFENDIGAID

Dolebolion is a traditional 395-acre livestock farm in Pontrhydfendigaid, run by the owner and their family. The farm specialises in beef and sheep production, making full use of the area’s productive grassland. It includes a spacious, energy-efficient farmhouse (EPC Rating B) with three reception rooms, four bedrooms (two en suite), plus an additional bathroom and shower room as highlighted on the attached floorplan.

The farm also boasts a range of modern outbuildings designed for feed, livestock, and machinery, which are set around dedicated hard-standing yards and could be used for various other purposes. Additionally, there is a traditional stone barn with potential for conversion, subject to planning permission.

Away from the main farmstead, there is a ruined house called Bronberllan. The owner has informed us that this property previously had planning permission to be reinstated as a holiday let, with electricity supplied via underground cables from a transformer on the farm. Water and drainage pipes, as well as a cesspit with a soakaway facility, are already in place.

The farm has diversified into a unique business with a two-mile asphalt rally stage called the Bont Dolebolion Rally Stage. This track, which runs up and down the farm hills, is available for hire by specialist car and automotive event organizers. Additionally, there are large hard-standing yards/paddocks for cars, lorries, and testing crews. The venue is also used for testing before the Rali Ceredigion event.

Located on the edge of Pontrhydfendigaid, the property enjoys local amenities such as a shop, post office, cafe, public house, garage, primary school, church, and chapels. The village also features the historic Strata Florida abbey, dating back to 1184, and offers recreational facilities including a leisure court, football pitch, village hall, playground, and the Pavilion Bont venue.

A secondary school and a selection of local shops can be found in Tregaron, just six miles away. For a wider range of services, Aberystwyth, a historic market and university town located 13 miles to the west offers a wide range of national retailers, the National Library of Wales, and Bronglais Hospital.

Situated in Ceredigion, the farm sits between the Cambrian Mountains and Cardigan Bay, offering easy access to a wide range of outdoor activities, including walking, cycling, and exploring the surrounding countryside and coastline. With a local economy rooted in agriculture and tourism, the property presents a valuable opportunity for new owners to build on its existing strengths or explore new ventures.

THE LAND

Dolebolion is a traditional livestock farm extending to about 395 acres. The farm has been run by the owner's family as a successful beef and sheep farm utilising the productive grassland. The lowland fields near the River Teifi are used for silage and hay making while the upland fields are used for grazing. The fields are fenced and accessible to modern farm machinery. There are pockets of mature woodland in the centre of the farm providing shelter for livestock and interesting habitats etc.

FISHING

The renowned River Teifi flows from the village to Strata Florida, running along the south of the farm. To the north, a stream provides year-round water for livestock before joining the Teifi in the village.
